(Journal #3: Herself) - b.c.u

Her name is Isabel; she is from Jalisco Mexico. At her 24 years old she is living with her parents and brothers in a small city in California. She had moved to California to follow her dreams. It was a challenge to her that completely changed her life. She said that her grandfathers, grandmothers, and parents are her motivation to keep studying and not giving up. Now, Isabel is in college where she is following her dreams, and she is majoring in spanish. She wants to be a spanish teacher. In her first semester of college, she took a Culture class with a cuban teacher who inspire her to not give up. In this class she had a bad experience, She had to write several essay, read and talk in English when she did not feel good to do this the teachers force her to did it, but she never gave up and decided to prove that she could do it. This teacher pushed her to do thing that she was afraid of doing like public speaking since the teacher pushed her to do things she was afraid of this made her believed more in herself. She started thinking that she was able to do everything she wanted to achieve. Isabel never regretted having choose to be a spanish teacher because this is her dream, to be a teacher, and teach others what she know is very pleasant. She works at a elementary school doing tutoring. Even though, Isabel had many situation that affected her studies, she has always pushed herself to keep doing god, and be a better student and person. For example, last month, Isabel had lost one of her grandfathers that she have loved him with all her heart, this experienced made her wanted to achieve her goals so she would made her family feel proud of her.

I'm sorry about the loss of your grand father. I know he was proud of you. Be proud of yourself!
